

The Swain County Consolidated Human Services organization is a dynamic, innovative, integrated health and human services agency composed of 3 divisions; Administrative; Public Health; and Social Services. This organization delivers, coordinates, and administers a range of federal, state, and local programs that address the County's health and welfare needs to a population of approximately 15,000 residents. The Swain County Department of Social Services is comprised of four programs; Child and Adult Protective Services; Food & Nutrition Services; Medicaid; and Child Support. This diverse organization strives to uphold a set of core values at work; respect, trust, integrity, diversity, equality, excellence, accountability, innovation, and collaboration. These values keep the organization and its individuals healthy, resulting in successful and sustainable quality service delivery. In addition, the County is committed to being a well-managed organization that relies on the talents of its workforce to succeed.

The Bryson City, North Carolina area offers a wide variety of recreational activities just miles away from lakes, white-water rivers, hiking trails, campgrounds, and horseback riding for endless family fun. Western North Carolina is very rural and is considered a great place to raise children and is home to the Great Smoky Mountains National Park, which makes up a large percentage of the land in Swain County, adding to the small town appeal. This area affords unlimited outdoor recreational and sporting activities for residents and visitors alike. The Great Smoky Mountain National Park is well known for its many and varied hiking, biking and horseback riding trails. There are many campgrounds in the area as Bryson City sees thousands of visitors coming into the area during tourist season to enjoy all the recreational opportunities. Bryson City is also home to the nationally known Great Smoky Mountain Railway, which offers scenic rides along the Tuckaseegee River. The beautiful river runs right through the town of Bryson City. Down the road a few miles is the Nantahala River, home to the renowned Nantahala Outdoor Center. It is home to National Kayaking events and draws people from all over the country.

Bryson City is only miles down the road from Cherokee, home of the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indian reservation. They also share the Great Smoky Mountain Park where visitors from all over come to visit Harrah's Hotel and Casino. Many top of the line restaurants are available to serve guests along with night life entertainment. Cherokee, NC is known for its many attractions like: Unto These Hills, an outdoor drama depicting the Trail of Tears, and the Oconaluftee Indian Village, just to name a few. If you need a change of scenery and are willing to re-locate for a great job opportunity, please consider Swain County, North Carolina.